

MANANA TABIDZE

QUESTIONS OF A LANGUAGE POLICY IN THE GEORGIAN REALITY

Language, together with culture, religion, and history, is a major component of nationalism. Language planning is usually seen as an explicit choice among alternatives. The policy approach refers, among other things, to the selection of a national language or a dialect to be made the standard, and solve the problems of orthography. Since languages depend on factors in their environment the mirror social diversity. Our task is to find different levels of development of language policy in Georgian reality.