

MIRANDA GOBIANI, TINATIN MEBURISHVILI

SOCIO-LINGUISTIC AND PSYCHOLOGICAL ANALYSES OF THE WOMEN ORATORY

Socio-linguistics discusses language on society as the unity of different structures, studying the relationship between language systems and social structures. The language is dealt together with its extra-linguistic factors (gender, age, occupation, social status etc. and the influence of the latter on the language proper. It is noteworthy that the intersection or interaction of the extra-linguistic factors find deferent reflections in male and female speeches, that conditions the interests of linguists Gender linguistics.

The study of male and female verbal language has quite recently been laid the foundation, consequently, many of the questions that are discussed on the level of hypothesis demand for more precise definitions. The article discusses materials about the female speech habits and provides them with socio-linguistic and psychological comments and interpretations.