

OTAR GOGOLISHVILI

ONCE AGAIN ON THE TREATY OF KARS

The 'Treaty of Kars' concluded between the Trans-Caucasian republics and the Turkish government in 1921 is unlawful as it was signed by the illegitimate authorities.

The last 'Georgian-Turkish Treaty' (of 1992) is also unlawful as it was signed by illegitimate putsch government – E. Shevardnadze Regime. Correspondingly, the speculation with the 'Treaty of Kars' is a sheer demagogy. Achara has always been one of the most integral parts of Georgia. Posing the question of borders is always a hazardous issue, moreover, if it is carried out through military means.

Aspiring for the right of entry in the European Union both modern Turkey and Georgia carry out inter-state relationship and the defense of the rights of the autochthonic ethnic minorities through the civilized frameworks. And the mutually benevolent and constructive neighborly relationships tend to develop further in the future.

Georgian people are eager to have good neighborly relationship with Russia as well, but the Russian empire cannot get on with the idea of the possible loss of the Trans-Caucasus and plans new aggressions against Georgia. Russian-Georgian relationships can gain civilized format only after Russia abandons aggressive policy against Georgia. Georgia should not be a victim of geopolitical ambitions.
