PRINCIPLES OF WORLDVIEW IN CULTURE

“Culture” is a scientific term used to express essence and meaning of such a significant concept as the whole complex of material and spiritual values created by humans in the course of the centuries. Culturology which studies the essence of culture and methods for identifying its inner structure and typology has the same relation to the history of culture as other theoretical and practical disciplines. A culturologist should be able to solve a complex problem of correspondence between abstract definition of culture and actual historical process.

History of culture studies all those components that contribute to the social progress. Development of every nation enriches the global culture. In the course of history, each nation, whether big or small, has created its spiritual world and values to be proud of, those to be protected and identified as a part of the common treasure of human civilization.
