LIA STURUA'S POEMS

Discussing the poetic world of Lia Sturua requires certain caution, extensive thinking and thorough reconsideration of formed opinions. It is quite difficult to directly outline a starting point of her poetry and poems, discover the beginning and the end, become part of the poet's intention, and follow the path of the characters of her lyrics.

Our aim is to present Lia Sturua's early poems such as "Thoughts at Sunset", "The Flood Tide", and "In the Circle". Apart from curiosity, the fact that they have been rather briefly discussed by literary critics sparked my interest.

The above-mentioned poems by Lia Sturua depict an expressive succession of intensive realistic images leading to such complex emotions, that the readers automatically become engulfed.
