ON PRIVATE LETTERS BY AKAKI TSERETELI

Private letters of a writer represent an important material for writing his comprehensive biography and for understanding of his spiritual world.

Akaki Tsereteli's letters include those to his mother, brothers, sister and famous public figures. Akaki's epistolary heritage is rather extensive.

The content, character and manner of the writer's letters largely depend on his relationship with the addressee, as well as on the main topic.

In his private letters Akaki applies dialectisms, barbarisms which contribute to the specific overtones reflected in them.

The letters are written in a lively colloquial idiom. Close study of the letters demonstrates that the poet's life and his ideals were harmonious.
